Here are 12 ways in which our Turnaround consultant will substantively contribute in the early stages of a turnaround:

- 1 Provide insight on assembling the 'turnaround team'; ensure representation from HR and high-performing employees.
- 2 Help senior leadership determine the business' existing core assets, including talent and processes that define the brand and provide competitive advantage; determine future core assets, including processes, capability and talent essential for mid and long-term success.
- 3 Develop and equip management with a robust communication and change management plan, including strategic objectives, identified mediums, change-agent roles, messaging and collateral schedules, measures of uptake etc.
- 4 Explore areas for saving cash, including eliminating nonessential meetings, programs and events.
- 5 Review talent information to ensure meaningful headcount reductions; push for targeted cuts to eliminate weaker performers and those in non-core areas.
- 6 Develop a plan and a validated process to identify, select and retain high performing and critical talent.
- 7 Design, develop and present key-employee retention plans / packages to lock in critical talent.
- 8 Ensure that survivors' workloads are monitored and their efforts don't go unappreciated; identify useful short-term reward and recognition strategies.
- 9 Engage employees to ensure workforce capacity (sales, service, productivity); articulate and reinforce the company's new employee experience brand .
- 10 Assist in the redesign of organizational structures impacting roles, responsibilities, spans of control and reporting relationships.
- 11 Coach senior leadership and management on tactics for effective 'turnaround leadership' (e.g. developing/maintaining trust; clarifying and reinforcing the change vision; establishing a sense of urgency; celebrating short-term wins; setting a challenging pace; maintaining focus and minimizing competing distractions; rewarding change agents).
- 12 Ensure that the broader HR community is well-versed in the talking points of the turnaround.

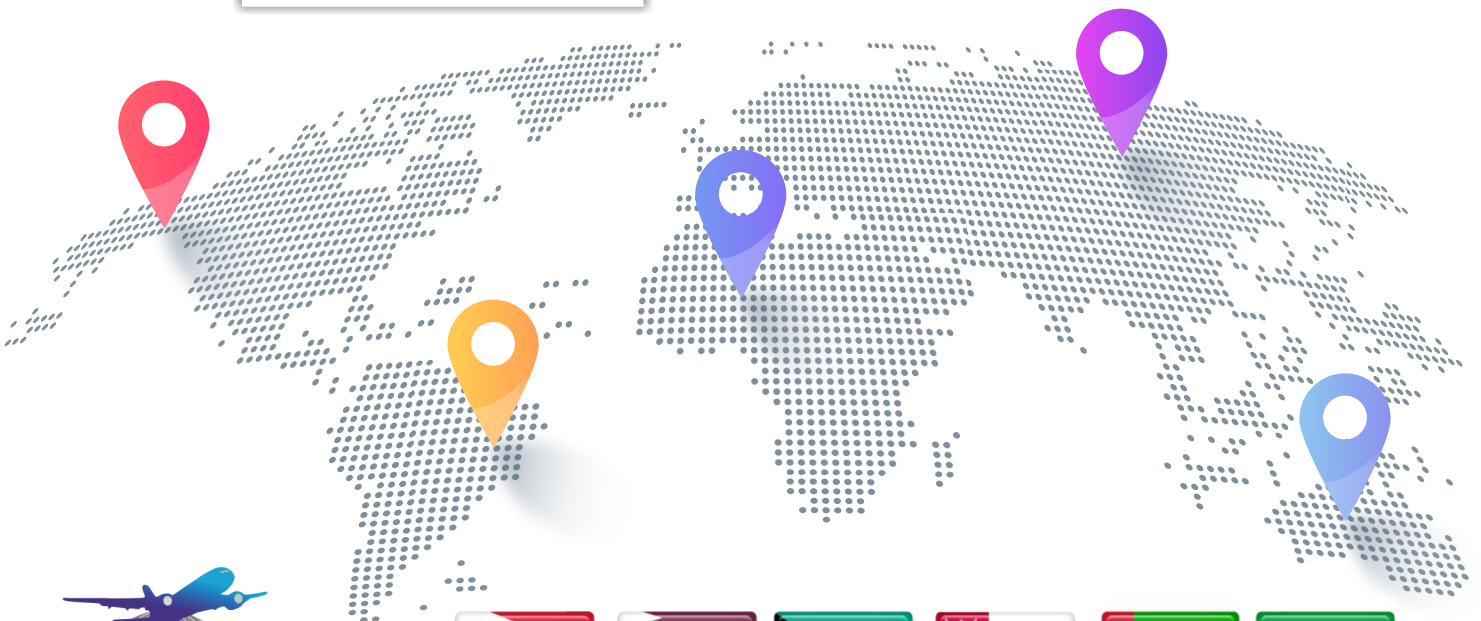

Turnaround consultant will work closely with senior leadership as a strong HR partner to promote the most effective development of the organization's human-capital resources moving forward.
